

BURGLARS WORK
IN DAYLIGHTGang Begins Operations in Salt Lake
in Afternoon.

TWO HOUSES ARE ENTERED

ACTIONS REMINISCENT OF PREVIOUS EPIDEMIC OF CRIME.

Two afternoon burglaries were committed yesterday, evidently by the same men. Dr. Ellis R. Ship's residence at 713 Second street was entered some time in the afternoon and every room was searched. The burglars secured about $17.50 in money and packed off several articles of clothing. Part of a set of silverware was missing. The booty amounted to about $100. Officer James Taylor investigated the case and found that an entrance was made by prying open a window screen in the rear of the house.

The family was away from home and when they returned an hour later they found the house ransacked. Every closet was searched and the things in the dresser drawers were emptied out on the floor.

Walk Into Forbes Home.

The second burglary was reported by M. H. Forbes, who lives at 3 Twelfth East street. His residence had been ransacked from top to bottom and about $200 worth of clothing, silverware and money taken. Mr. Forbes was unable to make out a complete list of the things taken, but near as could be told $75 had been secured, as well as several pieces of silverware and two or three suits of clothes. The house had been carefully left open by the family and the burglars had walked in and helped themselves. Mr. Forbes discovered that his house had been ransacked when he returned home about 5 o'clock. The police investigated the matter but to the clue of the men could be found. None of the neighbors had seen the men in that locality.

Like Previous Daylight Gang.

Salt Lake was infested with a gang of daylight burglars last summer and for several weeks hardly a day passed that a burglary was not reported to the police. Another gang is apparently at work again. The police have started out to drive them out of town or capture them. Mounted Officer Taylor has been detailed to patrol the residence districts during the afternoons.

GREAT MUSIC BY JONAS

Celebrated Pianist Charms Another Audience by His Wonderfully Artistic Work.

If the disgruntled pessimists who say that the piano has exhausted its means of artistic expression could often hear such an artist as Alberto Jonas, they might cease their gloomy, tiresome, ancient platitudes, for a time at least. Clayton hall was crowded with music lovers last evening, who thoroughly enjoyed the recital by the distinguished virtuoso. Wonderful is not too forcible a term to apply to his playing, both from a technical and interpretative point of view. Natural and unforced in style to a marked degree, Mr. Jonas first wins the confidence and admiration of his hearers by his quiet, reposeful manner.

The programme included the following:

Sonata, Opus 57 (Appassionata).....
L. van Beethoven
Allegro assai Andante, Allegro ma
Allegro assai

(a) Butterfly.....Edward Grieg
(b) Scotch Dance.....Frederic Chopin
(c) Etude in C major.....
(d) Etude in C sharp minor.....
(e) Etude in G sharp minor (in third).

Prelude and Fugue in E minor.....
Felix Mendelssohn
Northern Dances, Opus 12, Nos. 1,
2, 3.....Alberto Jonas
The Cuckoo.....Claude D'Aquin (1672)
Campanella (by request).....

In the Beethoven sonata "Appassionata" the work as to phrasing, pedaling and expression was truly masterly. The appreciation of the full knowledge of his compositions is necessary; to the temperament of the composer must be added the temperament of the performer and his hearers. Before playing the Sonata, Mr. Jonas gave an interesting talk on the structure of the composition, one that gave his hearers a well defined picture of the nature of the work. The first movement was wonderfully beautiful, expressing the restless, passionate nature of the great master; the andante following was full of tender grace and feeling. In the final "Allegro" he unraveled the technical difficulties with an absolute certainty and clearness that was marvelous.

A beautiful number was Grieg's "Butterfly" with its haunting elements of mystery and tender melancholy brought out with exquisite sympathy and delicacy of expression. The Chopin Etudes, which are certainly studies for masters more than pupils, were given in these three, and proved himself to be an unsurpassed interpreter of the immortal Chopin, and is always judged by a pianist to be the greatest Franco-Polish composer. Of the lighter numbers the most attractive was the D'Aquin composition, "The Cuckoo," which was played with a delicacy of tone that was realistic.

The Northern Dances, Jonas' own compositions, were a happy contrast to the heavy productions preceding. The performance of the "Appassionata" was brilliant and technical finish it could not be surpassed. For power, brilliancy and technical finish it could not be surpassed. For power, brilliancy and technical finish it could not be surpassed.

PLEASE TO MIND THE BABY.

This Is the Latest Request Made of Telephone "Central" by a Patron.

"Hello, Central. Will you please call me at No. 85787? I am going over there for a short time, and I am leaving the baby asleep, and I have a key in the wheel of the baby buggy up to just under the telephone and I shall leave the receiver off the hook, and won't you please listen, Central, and tell me when the baby wakes?"

This was the latest request reported as coming to the central office. The poor, abused central of whom the request was made lacked the ability to see the humor of the situation and indignantly called her superior to ask if she must add to her other duties that of nurse girl. She was told that she need not and conveyed a polite refusal to the patron, only to learn that she was denounced as a disobedient creature.

Dr. Keith has resumed his practice, Office, 12th East Brigham.

SAYS BEN FRANKLIN WAS PRESIDENT AND IS TURNED DOWN FOR CITIZENSHIP

Because he listed Benjamin Franklin as a former president of the United States, and for other reasons that to Judge Lewis seemed good and sufficient, Alberto Malo, a young Italian of Scofield, loses his chance to get a home-land on the Utah reservation.

Of course, Judge Lewis did not know what made Malo so anxious to become a citizen at this time, nor would it have affected the judge's decision had he known. The point was brought out after Malo's application had been denied.

Malo evidently had been carefully coached for the examination. He was correct on his dates and was able to recite the constitution. He appeared to believe this would be sufficient, but after Judge Lewis had taken him back over history's page for about ten minutes, Malo learned that a foreigner is supposed to know something about the country here before he gets an opportunity to play a part in directing its affairs.

Although he was positive that Franklin had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant. Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky. The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties. Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the time when he reached America in 1899 his historical and political information was shaky.

The judge endeavored to ascertain whether Malo had about political parties.

Malo informed him that the Socialists believed in "working all together for good and for all one."

Of the Democrats and Republican parties he appeared to know less. He had once been president, Malo confessed he had never heard of Lincoln or Grant.

Roosevelt and McKinley he knew, but back of the